

Sipahh Flavored Straw Turns Compostable

By Jonathan Charles on June 28, 2019

f SHARE

🐦 TWEET

📌 SHARE

g+ SHARE

0 COMMENTS

Award Winning Unistraw launches compostable straw.

Unistraw, the maker of the Sipahh brand of straws to create healthier flavoured milk, is pleased to announce that it is launching – with immediate effect – its new line of compostable straws.

Recognizing and responding to growing consumer concern over the environmental impact of single-use plastic straws, Sipahh quickly transitioned to the more sustainable alternative.

Sipahh straws will now be produced using PLA (polylactic acid), a thermoplastic derived from plant starch, such as corn or sugar cane rather than petrochemicals from fossil fuels. Eco-friendly PLA compostable straws are manufactured using less energy and safely break down, leaving no toxic residue.

Suchet Rastogi, CEO of Sipahh's parent Unistraw said: "We are in the business of health. Today, health is not just about products but about lifestyle. And the environment is a core part of any lifestyle."

Sipahh straws are available in a number of mouth-watering varieties, including Cocoa-Bean Chocolate, Luscious Strawberry, Banana Smoothie, Hello Marshmallow! and Velvet Vanilla.

